FLOOD DAMAGES.

Great Destruction Done by Overflowed

River-TEMPLE, Ariz., Feb. 28.-Salt river valley has just been visited by the greatest flood on record. The storm is general over this country. It swept over Arizona with a deluge of rain, raising mountain streams to torrents, and the rivers far above flood level. On Thursday morning Salt river had risen seventeen feet above the ordinary level at a point twenty-eight miles above Phoenix. At Temple, on the south side of the river, a railroad bridge was swept entirely away cutting off communication with Pho-nix.

A little south of Phoenix the river left the channel and overflowed a number of the channel and overhowed a number of farms, cutting off the railroad track. Many frome structures were floated away. The northern edge of the flood entered the city of Phaenix, flooding out many poor families. The electric light works were flooded and the town left in darkness. About 190 adobe houses fell in as soon as the water rushed through them. The river began to fall Friday afte noon and has now nearly reached its normal height. The loss by the flood is about $125,000.

Live Pinna Indians were drowned, and it is reported that a white family perished also on an island north of Phonix.

Years ago, when the excavatious were just beginning, a party of Cincinnatians found, in what had been the pantry of the house, many jars of preserved figs. One was opened, and were found to be fresh and good. Investigation showed that the figs had been jor into jars in a heated state, an aperture left for the steam to escape and then sealed with wax. The hint was taken, and the next year fruit canning was introduced into the United States, the process being identical with that in vogue at Pompeii twenty centuries ago. T. DO WITT TALMAGE.

This Discourse is One. It "The Ten New York Plagues of the Three Cities," and Gangthing Is Touched on This Time.

Brooklyn today by Dr. Talmage's anroancement of a series of sermons wries, he pays his attention to the prevn in the Academy of Music in Brooklvn in the morning, and again this evening at The Christian Herald service in this chy. His text was taken from Ux. ix. 13, 14: "Let my people go that they may serve me: for I will at this time send all my plagues."

Last winter, in the museum at Cairo, Egypt, I saw the mummy or embalaned body of Pharach, the oppressor of the ancient Israelites. Visible are the very teeth that he gnashed against the Isriclitish brick makers, the sockets of the merciless eyes with which he looked upon the overburdened people of God, the hair that floated in the breeze off the Red sea, the very lips with which he commanded them to make bricks without straw. Thousands of years after, when the wrappings of the nummy were unrolled, old Pharaoh lifted up his arm as if in imploration, but his skinny bones cannot again clutch his shattered scepter. It was to compel that tyrant to left the oppressed go free that the memorable ten plagues were Sading the Nile and walking amid the ruins of Egyptian cities, I saw no remains of those plagues that smote the water or the air. None of the from croaked in the one, none of the locusts sounded their rattle in the other, and the cattle bore no sign of the murrain, and through the starry nights hovering through the pyramids no destroying angel swept his wing, but there are ten plagues still stinging and befoulmg and cursing our cities, and like angels of wrath smiting not only the first born but the last born.

A COOKING SCHOOL IN EARNEST.

The Curriculum Includes Secubbing and Pating What Is Cooked. A cooking school that is a cooking school has just been of field in Cothenburg. Sweden It is no annex of the! girls part of the public school system; there, and every young young who is graduated must learn oil that the practical cooks in the money can teach. The cooking coursels a part of the senior year curriculum and includes twenty-four lessons. Twelve of these lessons are theoretical. The rest are practical. Ten of the practical lessons of two hours each are devoted to instruction in the most popular meats and vegetables. The ghis are obliged to peel potatoes, skin onious, pluck and stuff chickens, spit roasts and the like. They put on the kettles, feed and regulate the tires, wash the dishes and clean up generally after all is done. Three lessons of two hours each concern exclusively the preparation of bouilion, toast and the water, barle, soup and other similar dishes for ill persons.

The young women are instructed in classes of five, and each group prepares successively every dish in the course. The cooking is done mornings, the cooked dishes are served for the dinners of the pupils and teachers, and every girl is obliged to eat what she has out. During the afternoon each sindent writes a description of how and what she cooked, and appends suggesare read and corrected by the instruct ors, and at the end of the course the girl who cooked best and suggested the most palatable innovations in the proc ess will get a gold medal.

The course is unique in two particulars. All the girls must go to market Every Saturday is given over to house into their old gowns and gloves, twist out a friz in front or a fringe behind, and knuckle down to scouring the floor, washing the windows, polishing

A Dog Philosopher.

Not long since I had an excellent opportunity of observing one of the rovers. I am not learned in canine varieties, but should suppose he was some kind of mongrel terrier. Anyhow, he was cidedly long in proportion to the legs, look, and, lastly, with a moist, senti mental eye. If dogs had their religious sects one would set him down as a Methodist. He belonged, with two other dogs, to a friend of mine, who used to bring them, to my house when picking me up in his morning walk. The odd little creature contrasted strongly with another of the trio, who was about his own size, in the sedateness of his manner and his philosophic indifference to small canine worries

Thus it was not uncommon to see sight of a butcher's cart proceeding, as Every ingredient possesses superb Tohe no doubt thought, at an indecorous properties and exerts a wonderful induwhich he would in frenzy of rage, leaping in victim, the sparrow, which he would pursue in a frenzy of rage, leaping in impotent wrath underneath the tree to which the nimble little creature would naturally betake itself for shelter.

None of these things moved our canine philosopher. He paid not the slightest heed to his companion's violent rushings and barkings. As became a thinker, his voice was rarely heard. I have seen him set upon by his more mercurial companion in a fit of obstreperous joeosity, yet with admirable self restraint he would suffer himself to be barked at, knocked against, and even scrambled over, without uttering the slightest protest. It occurred to me that, like a recent British logician, he found the racket of the street favorable to philo-ophical abstraction.--Cornhill Magazine.
